Brand Strategy

Our brand strategy includes a set of strategic components that capture the essence of who we are. Every touchpoint of our brand should be anchored by our foundational Brand Strategy. Distilled down into compact words, phrases, and personas, these elements help us stay focused and grounded and serve to define our ideal reputation.

Positioning Statement

Our positioning statement is an internal-facing, external-inspiring statement that clearly articulates who we are, what we do, and how we are different, ultimately helping to amplify our brand in a noisy landscape. This statement is crafted to align internal teams and all marketing efforts to support a clear, cohesive, stand-out brand identity externally.

POSITIONING

The Department of City Planning is in complete service to shaping the future of Atlanta’s people and places through thriving and healthy neighborhoods.

NOTES

- “Complete service” represents our commitment to an excellent experience for our customers.
- “Shaping” speaks to our active role in collaborating with city leaders, developers, residents, and beyond for our city’s most ideal future.
- “Thriving and healthy neighborhoods” are a vital and unique part of Atlanta and its future.

Personality Attributes

Brand personality defines our voice and distinctive character. It reflects how we show up and addresses the following questions: What do we want people to think about how we sound, look, and act? How is our personality different from any other brand in our industry? While each attribute offers its own distinct value, it's the combination of these traits that makes a brand truly ownable.

Approachable

Accessible and inclusive with a relevancy that comes from listening and understanding.

Sensible

Transparent in how we approach things, reasonable in knowing what matters, and practical in removing barriers to get there.

Visionary

Out in front, always seeing a better way for our neighborhoods to thrive.

Celebratory

Calling attention to the collective efforts of our city towards healthy and thriving neighborhoods.

Intentional

Equipped with detailed plans, we work diligently to make Atlanta more equitable and flourishing.

Target Audiences

Our target audience persona is representative of people and organizations that have similar mindsets. This helps us to deeply empathize with and understand our audience’s functional and emotional needs — allowing us to create a brand that delivers value to the people who matter the most.

Hopeful Neighbor

Verbal Identity

Our verbal identity works with our visual identity to express a unique and well-rounded whole. Verbal tools, such as our brand voice and key messages, help us write and speak on-brand, and clearly communicate our value. This section provides the tools and applications needed to express who we are, what we do, and why what we do matters in a clear, compelling, and consistent manner.

Brand Voice & Tone

Our brand voice is how we speak to the world. Defining our voice helps us own a distinct personality and remain consistent across our communications. The tonal attributes listed below provide clarity and guidance for writers so they can strike the right tone for the Department of City Planning.

Approachable

Speaking directly to our audience with clear calls-to-action and invitations to engage.

- ✗

Impact Fees
- ✓

Fees are going up.

TIP
Wherever you see a static noun phrase, see if you can push it to be a question or verb phrase.

Sensible

Translating insider issues into the real-life impact for residents. Replacing jargon with plain, inclusive language that anyone can understand.

- ✗

Corner Conversations
- ✓

We’re listening.

TIP
Look for opportunities to more clearly translate the value for our audience.

Visionary

Going beyond information-sharing to inspire our audience to imagine (and achieve) the Beloved Community.

- ✗

Public Notice
- ✓

Attention, Atlanta!

TIP
Remember to challenge the way “we always do” or have always done things. Look for opportunities to speak louder, own our point of view, and move with more swagger.

Brand Voice & Tone

Our brand voice is how we speak to the world. Defining our voice helps us own a distinct personality and remain consistent across our communications. The tonal attributes listed below provide clarity and guidance for writers so they can strike the right tone for the Department of City Planning.

Celebratory

Highlighting what’s distinct about our city and sharing the wins — whether that’s breaking ground on a new development or gaining landmark status for a historic Atlanta icon.

Quarterly Update

The Update

Where have we been? Where are we going? Presenting the latest developments from last quarter.

TIP
Look to capture, wherever possible, the real energy and excitement of what we’re doing.

Intentional

Weaving the bigger story of our vision for Atlanta’s future into everything we say, share, write, or post.

Job Opening

Work with us

TIP
Imperatives and calls to action can help our headers feel more intentional, less automatic.

Things to Watch Out For

Old habits die hard.

Remember: Let's strive to tell the bigger story in everything we do.

WATCH OUT FOR

- ⊗ Functional messages that feel impersonal, passive, and jargon-heavy
- ⊗ The Intimidation Factor (a.k.a. jargon)
- ⊗ Posts that repeat the same information when there is an opportunity to expand upon and explain
- ⊗ Generic language that is easy to ignore

Headlines

The quickest, most effective way to bring our brand voice and personality to life is through a headline. Typically the largest, most prominent message on a page, headlines summarize what comes next and draw the reader in.

USE CASES

- Website headers
- Social media posts
- Billboards or outdoor signage
- Section of a brochure

Conversation Starter & Social Media Bio

USE CASES

- Website search description
- Website front page
- Social media profiles

A one-sentence description explaining who we are, what we do, and why we’re different. Since it’s high-level information, the conversation starter is intended to prompt further questions or action.

CONVERSATION STARTER

The Department of City Planning is responsible for the shaping of our city and the places and spaces we share.

SOCIAL MEDIA BIO

Official account for the Atlanta Department of City Planning. Working toward MLK’s Beloved Community where all Atlantans thrive.

Opening Paragraph

This is how we introduce our brand to the world in one succinct paragraph. It is meant to serve as a starting point that can be shifted and built on to apply to specific audiences and contexts.

USE CASES

- Website “About Us” page
- Brochure or printed pieces
- PR boilerplate

The Department of City Planning works to achieve Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.’s vision of the “Beloved Community”: a flourishing, inclusive city where all Atlantans thrive. To get there, we are following the plan laid out in the Atlanta City Design. We’re upholding building codes to keep city structures safe. We’re preserving the tree canopy that shades our sidewalks. We’re rewriting zoning ordinances to solve housing problems. And that’s just the beginning. Through our NPU system, residents like you can weigh in on the future of your city every step of the way. All for Atlanta, Atlanta for all.

Key Message: CDP Update

USE CASES

- Brochures and sales materials
- Web pages

Since our opening paragraph can't do all the heavy lifting, our key messages allow us to expand on important aspects of our brand.

Be a part of the plan

Plan A (the update to the city's development roadmap) will be written this year, and you have a chance to weigh in. What does your neighborhood desperately need? What do you believe must absolutely change — or stay the same — about your city? We want your two cents. Get involved at your neighborhood's next meeting.

Key Message: NPU Anniversary

Since our opening paragraph can't do all the heavy lifting, our key messages allow us to expand on important aspects of our brand.

USE CASES

- Brochures and sales materials
- Web pages

NPU wants you

Celebrate the 50th anniversary of NPUs by joining one.

Fifty years ago, Maynard Jackson, Atlanta's first Black mayor, created the NPU system to ensure the people of Atlanta were directly involved with the planning of Atlanta. NPUs, or Neighborhood Planning Units, are made up of Atlanta residents just like you. Unique to Atlanta, NPUs allow you to provide critical feedback that influences development in your own neighborhood.

Now, you're invited to celebrate the founding of this system by engaging with it directly. No special skills, experience, or membership card are required. Simply find your NPU and show up to the next meeting.

Creator's Checklist

This is a quick checklist for anyone to use when writing for the brand — and for DCP marketers to use when reviewing provided content.

*Still have questions? Great — we're ready for you.
You can reach us at dcpcommunications@atlanta.gov.*

So, you're finished with your draft. Wait just a minute ...

- ☐ Jargon Check
Would your grandma understand your headline? What about the rest of the piece?
- ☐ Passive vs. Active
Any lazy verb phrases like “is being extended” lying around? How can you flip them?
- ☐ You Get a Brand, and You Get a Brand
Did we create a new brand for something that doesn't need one? Does it inadvertently cause confusion or divert awareness from DCP?
- ☐ No Brand, Just Bland
Are we boring our readers before they get past the headline? Where can we push the language to be more relevant and engaging? What are we really trying to say?
- ☐ The “You”s Have It
Who is the audience? Where can we speak to them more directly, using “you” language?
- ☐ What's the Point?
How does this piece relate to our overall purpose? Where can we point people back to the vision of the Beloved Community?

Okay, now you're done. Good job. Call your grandma. You've got something she wants to read.

Visual Identity System

Overview

The Department of City Planning’s visual identity is a unified system comprising core elements such as brandmark, color, and type, along with extended expressions including photography and graphic assets. This wide range of tools is designed to be flexible and expandable. To effectively define the full brand experience, these core elements must be aligned across every touchpoint, from the stationery to the website.

PRIMARY BRANDMARK

DCP MONOGRAM

CITY SEAL

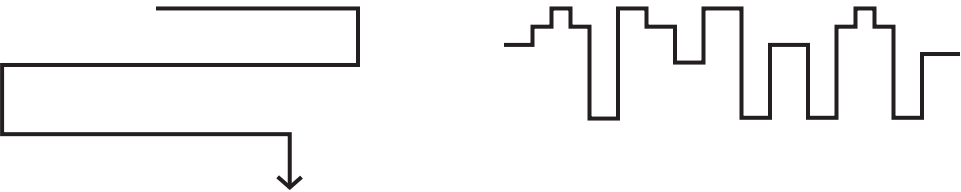

BRAND FONTS

TUNGSTEN
Inter Medium
Inter Regular

COLOR PALETTE

GRAPHIC DEVICES

Brandmark

The primary brandmark is the city seal locked up with a typeset wordmark. Lead with the primary brandmark across all printed and digital collateral.

The DCP monogram is a secondary element designed for applications such as social media and internal documents where the viewer is aware of the brand and the primary brandmark would not be able to fit inappropriately. Do not overuse this icon.

DCP MONOGRAM (REVERSED)

Brandmark Usage

Lead with the primary brandmark across all printed and digital collateral. Do not reconfigure, alter, or misuse the brandmark in any way. Further usage guidance is outlined below.

NOTES

A. Clear space

To ensure clarity, allow for ample space around the brandmark. This exclusion zone should be free of all other elements.

B. Minimum size

To ensure legibility, adhere to the minimum reproduction size.

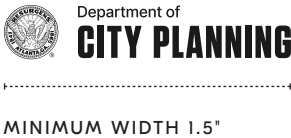

C. Do not

- 1. Use unapproved layouts or alter elements
- 2. Use unapproved colors
- 3. Stretch or condense
- 4. Use the brandmark on a competing color
- 5. Include elements within the exclusion zone or use unapproved typography

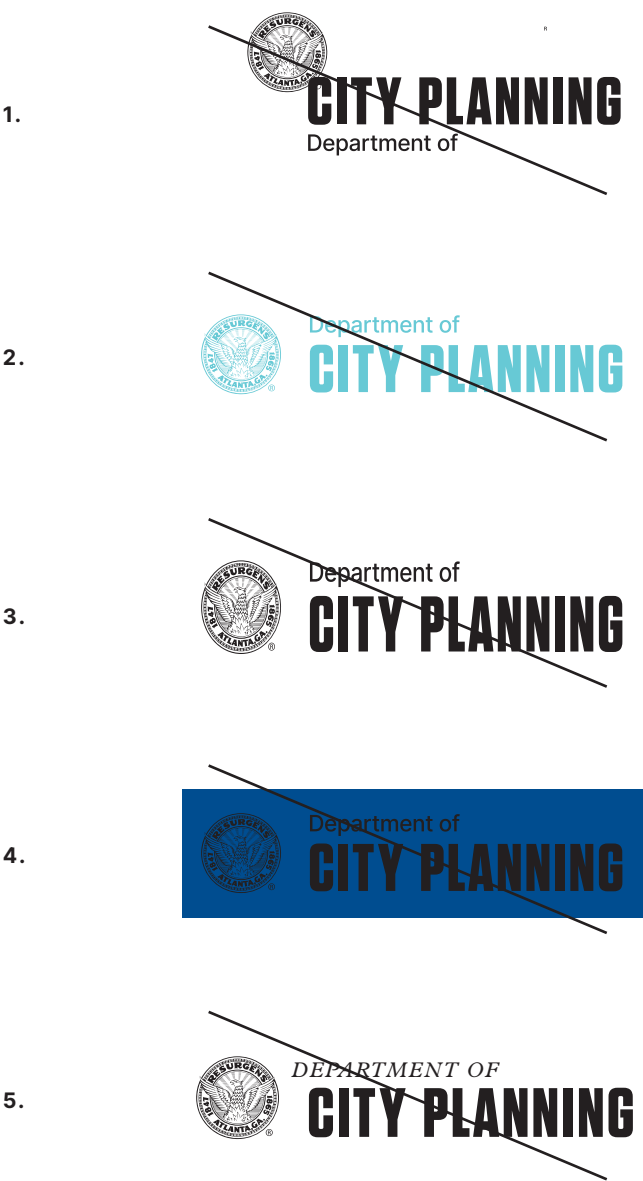

A. CLEAR SPACE

B. MINIMUM SIZE

C. DO NOT

Sub-brands

Initiatives, sub-brands, or projects do not get a unique symbol. They should follow the structure shown below: set in Tungsten and endorsed with the “Department of City Planning” caption text. These logos may be used with or without the City Seal. Additional symbols can cause confusion and detract from the awareness of the DCP brand efforts.

Color & Usage

These colors serve as a foundational palette that works across all media. Though logos may be used only in black or white, colorblocks and graphics benefit from having a wide range of colors to pick from. Use the lighter range of the palette with black text, the darker range with white. Colors may be used on their own or paired with a neutral shade. Do not mix and match multiple colors in layouts, except when executing infographics.

Find a color codes cheat sheet and swatches to load into the Adobe InDesign, Illustrator, and Photoshop on the SharePoint folder: Comms Public Assets/Brand Assets/Colors. You may need to ask someone on the Comms team for access to this folder.

DISCLAIMER

Color variations in print may occur, but try to match the color palette as closely as possible. Variations in color also may occur on-screen as a result of different screen calibrations and/or software application being used.

Brand Fonts

DCP’s leading typeface is Tungsten Bold. Tungsten is accompanied by varying sizes and weights of Inter to maintain legibility while establishing clear hierarchy. Reference the Applications section for examples of type usage.

Tungsten

Tungsten is a confident, compact sans serif that is bold and friendly. Tungsten Bold may be used for large-scale headlines of five words or fewer. Set in sentence case, though all caps may be used for exclamatory headlines. Tungsten Medium is reserved for showcasing statistics.

Type Hierarchy

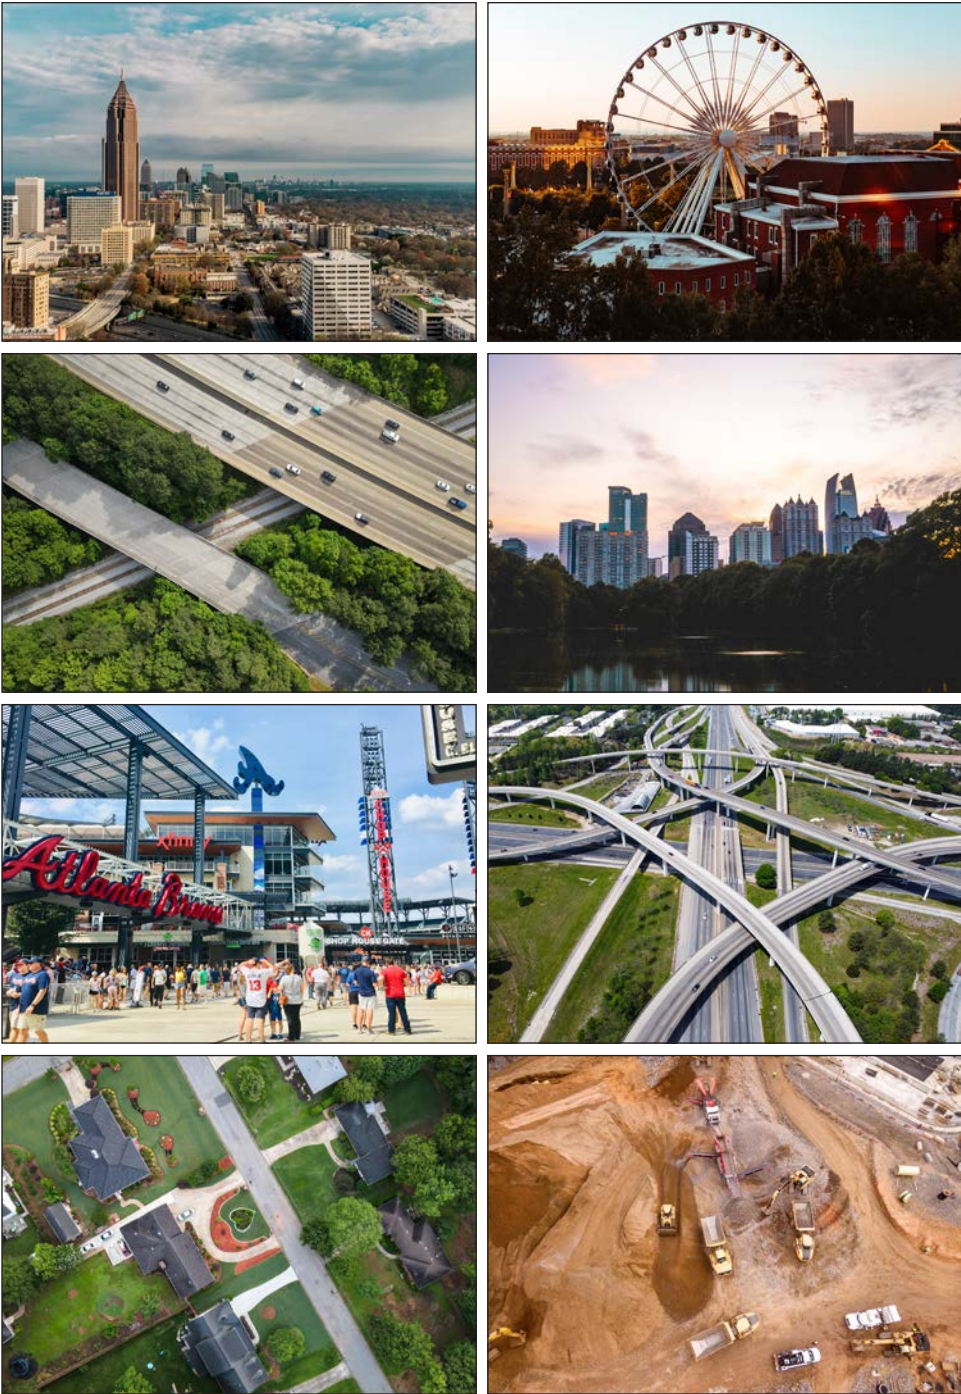

The following demonstrates our typographic hierarchy system to ensure contrast and effective organization of information. Setting type and leading on a 12-pt baseline grid is the easiest way to break down size relationships and adhere to the document grid.

Photography

Photography should aim to capture the diversity of Atlanta, both in its cityscape and its people. Shots should be clear and in focus, using natural lighting and strong composition. Play with zoomed-out shots of the city as well as highlighting details within neighborhoods. Moments with people in them should capture candid engagement and active personality.

MACRO

PEOPLE

Graphic Devices

Inspired by the neighborhood and district boundaries that DCP works with, these linear graphics illustrate borders, pathways, and the directional nature of DCP’s work. Simple and easily digestible, they are suited for animation and inject visual interest without distracting. They should appear in black or white only. Reference the Applications section for examples of usage.

A. Photo Outlines

Outlining photography heightens contrast against colored backgrounds. The weight of the outlines is dependent on the application, but should generally be subtle; approximately 0.5–1 pts for digital and handheld print applications.

B. City Skyline

The city skyline is an easily adjustable graphic that can be used with simple, type forward layouts. The weight of this graphic can be thicker than the lines used around photography; 2-4 pts, depending on the application.

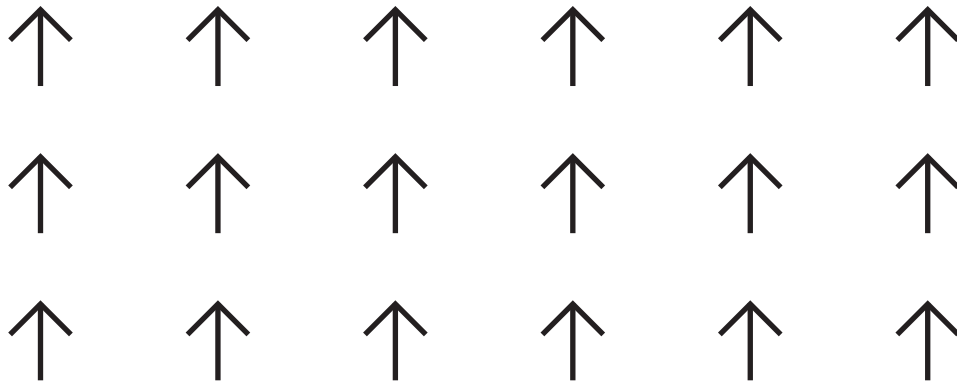

C. Arrows

Arrows, in a grid or even snaking across a layout, provide movement that guides the viewer’s eyes. Arrow and line weights should be 2-4 pts, depending on the application.

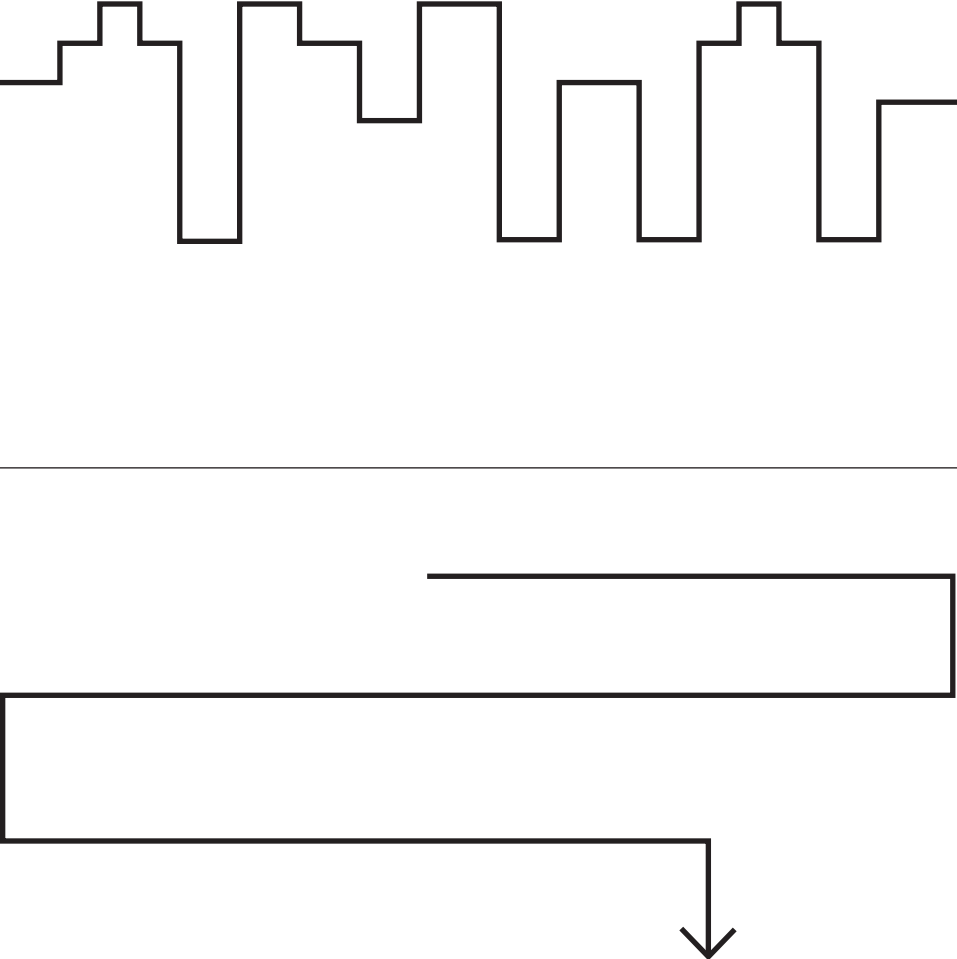

A. PHOTO OUTLINES

C. ARROWS

B. CITY SKYLINE

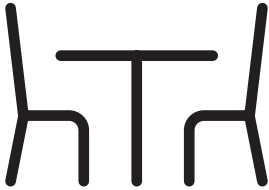

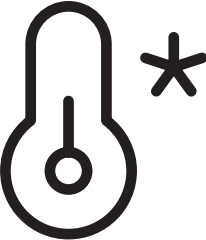

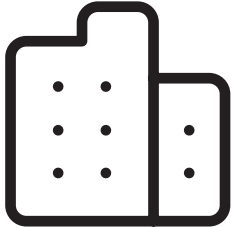

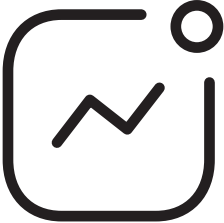

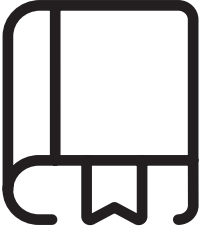

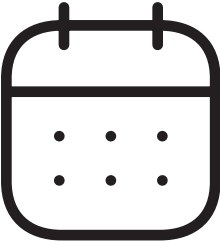

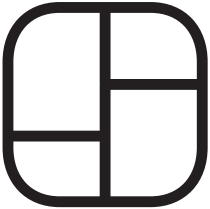

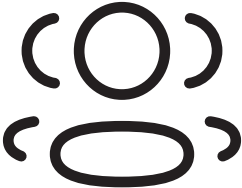

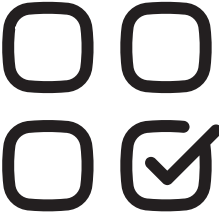

Iconography

DCP uses Iconly Pro, a user-friendly platform that offers an expansive library of customizable icons. DCP icons should be simple and approachable, rendered in a light stroke weight and rounded corners. Size appropriately to the context, making certain the icon is easily distinguishable and does not overshadow other content. Clear space around icons is equal to half the icon's height. Use in black or white only.

NOTES

Iconly Pro settings

Style: Light
Type: Regular
Customize: 1.5 px

Infographics

Infographics are integral in relaying and summarizing data. Graphics should be as simple as possible, utilizing a light/dark color pair with neutrals to delineate information. Choose the format appropriately to the context. Reference the examples below in making stylistic decisions.

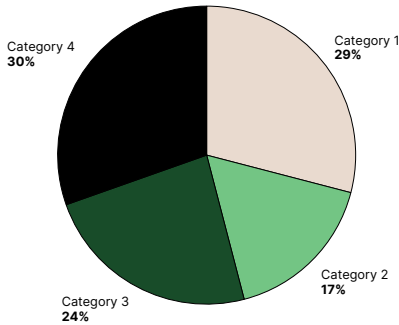

NOTES

- Color
Use colors of the same family and neutrals to keep infographics looking polished and cohesive.
- Outline
Graph sections and bars are outlined to keep in line with the rest of the DCP brand system. Tables should use thin outlines as well. Neutral fills help separate rows and columns.

Motion Graphics: Principles

These motion principles serve as a foundation and guiding light for all of DCP’s motion graphics and video work. No matter what category the work is in, strive to adhere to the principles below.

DEVICES

Simple

All visual devices in motion graphics and videos should adhere to the rest of DCP’s brand guidelines. Strive to deliver content in a beautiful, clear, and concise manner. To achieve this, be simple in the graphic devices and visuals employed in motion applications. Never create new devices outside the master brand guidance. Keep forms simple and do not use unnecessary visual effects such as shadows, blurs, or warps.

MOVEMENT

Smooth

All movement should be smooth, natural, and in line with physical laws of motion. Always utilize Easy Ease tools and graphs to finesse how objects accelerate and decelerate. Never set movement to an object without first thinking about its velocity.

LAYOUT

Precise

Every animated piece should be laid out with precision, adhering to consistent margins, grid organization, and type styling. A well-considered static composition is easier to translate into animations and maintains clarity in motion.

Motion Graphics: Examples

Break out information into different frames to create easily digestible stories. Simple transitions flow the frames together. Make certain pacing feels steady and comfortable for the content.

Find motion templates and examples here.

Transitions
Simple fading and subtle directional movements add interest between frames without being distracting. Transitions should suit the content and should not be flashy.

Variety
Typographic, graphic, and photographic approaches to motion are all encouraged. Exploring combinations of the three adds variety to DCP’s motion set.

TEXT & IMAGE

GRAPHIC

Constructing Layouts

When building layouts, utilize a 12-pt document grid to easily break up the page and assure layouts are well-organized, precise, and clean. The grid is a flexible guide to help decide sizing and spacing units to suit content. Exact measurements will change, depending on the application. Do not overlap text and image.

NOTES

Margins & borders

Maintain equal margins and borders within a composition, designating an appropriate measurement, based on the document grid and application.

Typography sizes

Using type sizes and leading that are divisible by 6 or 12 helps fit type easily on the grid.

Photography

Feel free to use the grid to create various geometric holding shapes for photography. These blocks should be used to better fill negative spaces in layouts and add another layer of interest.

GRID USAGE

Application Examples

The examples shown in this section help cast vision for a variety of applications. These mockups demonstrate both the flexibility and consistency of the DCP brand identity system. Note the use of the brandmark, typography, color, graphic assets, and messaging that work together to create an instantly recognizable brand.

Social Media

Various social templates have been created to suit the different types of information that may need to be posted. Be aware of color usage to keep a diverse range of colors on the feed. Below are a few notes to keep in mind while designing for social media.

Find social post templates here.

TEXT & IMAGE

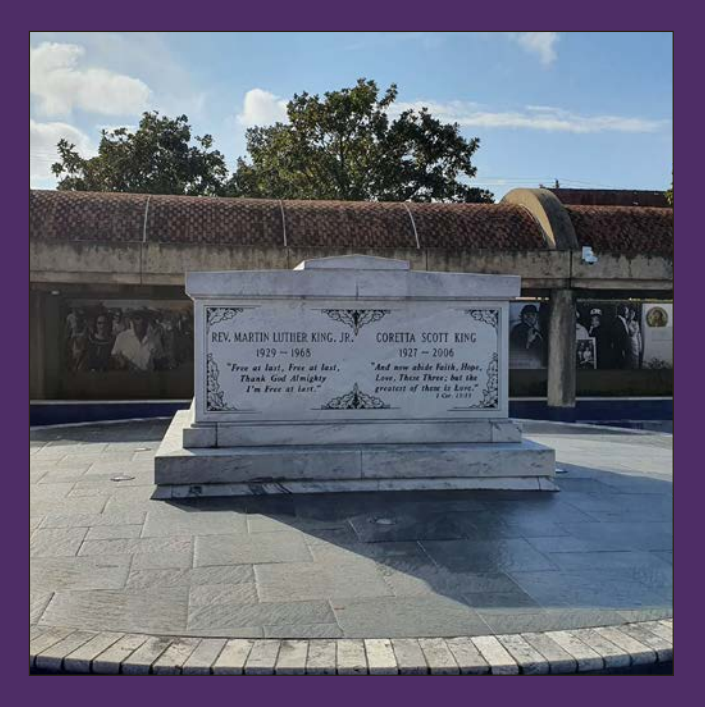

Short headlines may be paired with photography. Keep things interesting by playing with the grid and breaking down spaces reserved for imagery. Outline photography with a thin stroke.

TEXT ONLY

For posts with more information, keep headlines short to make a bold statement with Tungsten. Important information may be highlighted on the post, but reserve explanation and details for the caption when possible.

IMAGE ONLY

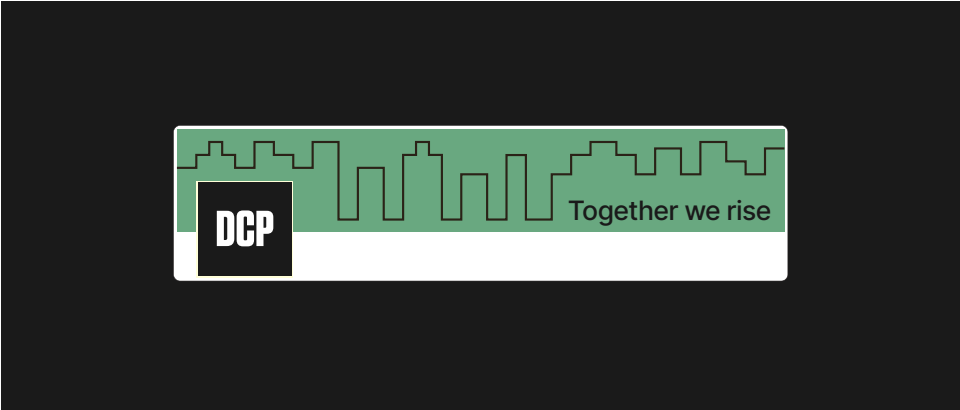

While full-bleed imagery is acceptable, inset imagery against a colored background allows for the DCP branding to come forward. Layouts may be broken down further to incorporate more than one image. Outline photography with a thin stroke.

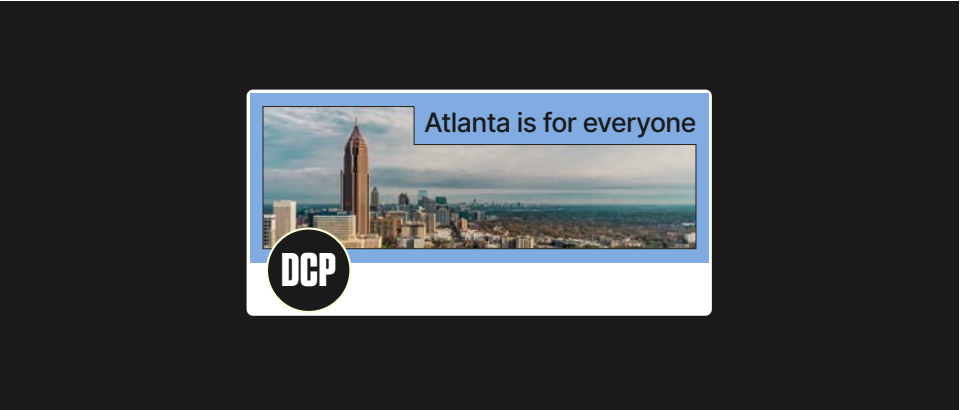

Social Profile Banners

Social media banners should be simple and eye-catching. This is an opportunity to showcase pieces of the graphic toolkit that viewers may not interact with in more informative collateral.

Love thy neighborhood

Our main streets hold the story of our past and future.

The Atlanta Main Street program empowers business district organizations:

- to support small businesses
- to preserve community identity
- to connect to city government and economic development partners

Atlanta Main Street brings together a cohort from East Atlanta, Little 5 Points, Sweet Auburn, West End and Virginia Highland to learn and implement the Main Street approach, a national model for preservation-based economic development. The Main Street framework helps communities organize and develop transformational strategies for cultural and historic preservation, small business support, and the design and promotion of vibrant business districts.

Subhead

For over 40 years, the Main Street approach has been used in over 1300 communities across the country to guide community-led commercial district revitalization. The framework helps communities organize and develop transformational strategies for the preservation, design, and promotion of business districts. By partnering with Georgia Main Street from Georgia's Department of Community Affairs, Atlanta Main Street adapts the Main Street model for Atlanta and provides the funding and framework to help districts thrive as strong, diverse, and vibrant destinations.
